Have you been denied compensation for your service-connected disability?

Does a denial mean that I am not disabled?

No. The Veteran's Administration has very particular information when evaluating applications, such as whether or not you have evidence showing that your disability is connected to an in-service incident or whether you have evidence showing that in-service incident is linked to your current diagnosis.

If the Veteran's Administration has denied your claim for your service connected disability, please contact our office now for a free claim review.
